“ Chuck Sheldon was my closest friend during junior and high school years. I loved him dearly, always as a friend. Our birthdays were one day apart, and I still have a treasured gift that he gave me. It seems he found the love and happiness I always wished for him.

“ How very sad I was to hear about Charles' death. We have seen one another only a handful of times in adulthood but he has been a friend since we were children and because of those 20 years, I've always considered him one of the special people in my life. Our fathers worked together in the picture business, our families socialized and went to church together, through junior high and high school we went to school together and spent untold hours on the phone, and for one humorous summer we guided tours at Universal Studios. Charles was the bearer of news, good and bad, the guy with the great idea. He was always ready to listen, always ready with a good story and good advice. He was so caring of his parents and my mother too. Such a kind and generous man. My deepest sympathy to Joseph.
